Title: Daybreak
Artist: CHRIS HOPKINS

Introducing to American audiences a brilliant young German pianist, Chris Hopkins, whose swing-oriented and stride-inspired piano playing finds its roots in Earl Fatha Hines, Teddy Wilson and Jess Stacy, as well as in the stridemasters of Harlem, James P. Johnson, Fats Waller and Willie The Lion Smith, „Chris Hopkins“, Dan Barrett enthuses, „is one of the most talented young pianist I've heard. I just flipped when I first heard him because he's not yet out of his twenties and, although his playing reflects his study of the men who created jazz piano, he brings his own ideas to the table.

Title: Tandem

Artist: BERND LHOTZKY & HOPK

The cradle of ragtime is located in Sedalia, Missouri, where Scott Joplin found eternal fame with the Maple Leaf Rag and The Sting. The term ragtime refers to the distinctive, „torn“ rhythm of this music. Basically it consists of the contrast between a syncopated melody and a steady 2/4 time accompaniment to it. Due to its two-handed nature, the piano was exactly the right instrument for the harmony based on simple cadences. The most important early representatives of piano rag are Scott Joplin and James Scott. But also „Jelly Roll“ Morton and Tom Turpin belong to it. The swinging rag became the basis of the subsequent Harlem stride piano style.

The New York district of Harlem between 58th and 130th streets became the creative center of jazz in the 1920s with the „Cotton Club“, the Apollo Theater and the „Savoy Ballroom“. In the musical competition, pianists such as Duke Ellington or Fats Waller played against each other. Harlem became the focus of the driving solo style called „stride piano“ (from the English „stride“: to walk quickly and with big strides). It is the principle of melodic improvisation over a harmonic basis, with the left hand constantly changing between bass note and chord. The Harlem Stride Rag found its most prominent representatives in James P. Johnson, Willie „The Lion“ Smith, Eubie Blake and of course the great Thomas „Fats“ Waller.

The two pianists Bernd Lhotzky and Chris Hopkins follow in their footsteps with their album „Tandem“ - and chapeau, the shoes fit! Stylistically of captivating purity, in expression doing justice to the models and with a fine feeling for swing and tempi, they have recorded an album with 15 pieces from the heyday of jazz piano. Alternating in duo or solo, Lhotzky and Hopkins bring back this time with compositions by Rodgers/Hart, Duke Ellington, Willie Smith, Cole Porter, Irving Berlin, Bix Beiderbecke and Harry Warren, among others. What they don't achieve on their brilliant Steinways is the Harlem club atmosphere, the sparkling clean album just sounds too clean, too academic for that. But every finesse of the perfectly produced CD can be experienced so delicately, as if you hear/see every single drop of a fountain in the sunlight and at the same time in harmonious harmony with all the others. It always remains an undivided pleasure.

In addition, refined border crossings are offered, such as in the virtuoso duo „Everything I've Got Belongs To You“ (Rodgers/Hart) or echoes of Kurt Weill in Ellington's „Black And Tan Fantasy“, while gentle tones e.g. in „Warm Valley“ (Ellington) „Flashes“ (Beiderbecke) flatter. With „Tandem“ Hopkins and Lhotzky have recorded a very fine, elegant and very distinguished album, which finds its dignified conclusion with George Gershwin's „Bess, You Is My Woman Now“. „Tandem“ has what it takes to become the standard for every cultivated jazz record collection.

Title: The Evil Crown
Artist: MOJO BLIZZARD

What if one were to consider „Lilith“ as an analogy of equal rights, if one were to assume that she is under the same influence of the lust for power as those she is trying to fight? What if she is subject to the temptation of the seven deadly sins like every human being? Let's find out by listening to our second album. „The Evil Crown“ basically says the following: Accept not only the right to equality, but also the responsibility that comes with it.

Eight very different songs in a very particular style: MOJO BLIZZARD stands for versatility and atmosphere under the umbrella of stoner metal.

Title: Herz aus Gold
Artist: IONA BLUM

A particularly sonorous and witty acoustic pop album of this year's winter comes from the exceptional artist Iona Blum. Lyrics rich in content meet chanson-like melodies and light pop sounds, taking you on a journey through Iona Blum's soul and world of experience.

All the songs are written by Iona Blum, but Lutz Krajenski (Roger Cicero, Annett Louisan, among others) had a hand in a few of them, arranging the songs for the orchestra in a wonderful way and playing the piano himself. Other top-class musicians - among others the drummer Dominik Hahn (GötzAlsmann) and the bassist Olaf Casimir (Annett Louisan) - also contributed to this album. A really substantial album, in which the artist advances unaffectedly and captivates with imaginative naturalness. A really touching album!

Title: Wir Sind Frei
Artist: DANI SUARA

A profound songwriter, a gifted singer and an exciting presenter: Dani Suara is an exceptional artist with a gift for touching people and moving them - whether live or on record. And when it comes to quality, the artist, who lives near Stuttgart, makes no compromises: The production and recording of his debut album took him two whole years and often pushed not only himself, but also his co-writers and producers Frank Wesemann and Eric Regul to their limits. But the effort was worth it. An album like a rock, serious and honest.
